I have the following problem:

```
class Foo { private Dictionary>> _methods; public Foo() { _methods = new Dictionary>>(); } public void Foo() { var o = new T(); foreach (var mi in _methods.Keys) { o._methods[mi].Invoke(o, new Func[] { "Name", "Age" }); } } }

 This class is used to add methods to a type. This works fine when the parameter is known at compile time. But how can I achieve the same effect with a dynamic parameter? Thanks in advance! A: Dynamically typed,

public class Foo { private Dictionary>> _methods; public Foo() { this._methods = new Dictionary>>(); } public void Foo(T2 t2) { var o = t2;

Menu 5 Reasons You Should Use Hospitality Software Whether you're a restaurateur, a corporate event director, or the owner of a short-term apartment complex, using hospitality software is the key to success. Your success - and the success of your staff, guests, and company - is dependent upon having the right software to help them make decisions quickly, work efficiently, and give a great guest experience. Your hotel or event software is the best way to benefit from these powerful features and more:

1. Increase customer satisfaction The hospitality industry is plagued by long lines and wait times. You can do a lot to improve the guest experience by having the right tools to quickly manage staff, reduce customer wait times, and keep guests informed about delays and rescheduling.
2. Reduce Turnover and Increase Turnover Organizing a successful hotel is no easy task. Your hotel staff needs to know the best routes to take when driving guests from the airport to the hotel, anticipating any special requests guests may have, booking and updating reservations, and making sure all the amenities and locations are ready for each guest. Hospitality software will make this task easier and more effective by keeping staff informed on each guest, tracking reservations, and providing a single place for all reservations to be made. You'll be able to easily assign tasks and delegate responsibilities and use the software to keep track of your hotel staff's schedules, driver routes, and assignments.
3. Manage your staff more easily The benefits of using hotel, event, and apartment software come not just from its ability to enhance the guest experience, but also with its ability to help you organize and manage your staff. Modern hospitality software helps hotel management to promote productivity among its staff, improve communication, simplify processes, and update payroll. While in the past you may have had to track different schedules, different pay rates, and different healthcare benefits, modern software will ensure that your workers get the same benefits, have access to the same schedule, and can pay taxes on time and receive full reimbursement. This will all make your life as a manager much easier.
4. Recognize, reward, and applaud your staff You can reward your staff for a job well done by awarding them extra hours or using a payroll software with a database. You'll also be able to keep track of your staff's productivity, achievements, and training and track earnings using hospitality software.
